VORICONAZOLE

PATIENT ALERT CARD

Please carry this card with you at all times

Inside

You should avoid exposure to direct sunlight during Voriconazole treatment. It is important to cover sun-exposed areas of skin and use sufficient sunscreen with high sun protection factor (SPF) as an increased sensitivity to the sun's UV rays can occur. There is a small chance that skin cancer could develop over time.

You should contact your doctor if you experience sunburn or severe skin reaction following exposure to light or sun.

Please ensure that you undergo all follow-up visits for blood test or skin evaluations arranged by your doctor. Please have a list of all your other medicines and medical conditions available at each visit to a healthcare professional.
